Dr. Koon-Hui Wang, Associate Professor and Chair, Dept. of Plant and Environmental Protection Sciences (PEPS), at the University of Hawaii Manoa will speak on "Pest Management for Hobby Orchid Gardeners" with a focus on insectary plants. What are insectary plants? you ask. Well insectary plants are those that attract insects to control thrips, spider mites, and other orchid pests through biological pest control rather than insecticides. Insectary plants increase the abundance and effectiveness of natural enemies that help suppress pest populations.

Dr. Wang received a PhD in Plant Pathology, an M.S. in Horticulture and a B.S. in Horticulture. She is a noted authority in her field, has published numerous articles and books, teaches at UH Manoa and conducts research. For additional information please review the following webpage:

We are honored to have her speak to us at Honolulu Orchid Society's general membership meeting.
